

KAISER'S ARMY DRIVEN BACK TO GERMAN SOIL IN REGION NEAR NANCY

YIELDING LINE OF INVADERS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN REPULSED DECISIVELY ON EASTERN END.

PROGRESS NEAR YPRES

Terrible Battle Along The Yser River Continues With Unabated Fury Today With Allies Holding Ground.

The unyielding German line which for six weeks has been stretched across France, is said by the authorities of the French war office to be broken at last.

Near the east end of the line in the region beyond Nancy today's French official statement reports, the invaders have been driven back onto German soil. At other points over the long line, the offensive has been resumed by the allied forces after a long period of comparative inaction.

The French claim to have won the advantage in an engagement at a point where the line sweeps eastward from the north, less than 60 miles from Paris. Between Soissons and Berry-Aux-Bac to the east of the bend in the line, heavy fighting has been resumed. Apparently the engagement was limited to an artillery duel, the entrenched position of the opposing forces forbidding the use of infantry.

To the northward along the Franco-Belgian border the fighting continues with undiminished ferocity. Along the Yser, where the struggle has been most intense, the allies have not drawn back, says the French official statement, while toward the south further progress has been made between Ypres and Roulers.

As reports filter in from the scene of fighting along the North Sea supplementing the unemotional official statement, it became evident today that the recent battles along the shore of the North Sea have been the most terrible of the war. From Emperor William himself, it is said, came the order that the German advance down the coast must be continued at any cost and that Calais must be taken. The desperate assaults which followed, particularly along the have continued to make progress in the region between Ypres and Roulers. In the general region between Soissons and Berry-Aux-Bac, an artillery engagement resulted to our advantage and resulted in the destruction of several batteries of the enemy.

"In the region to the east of Nancy between the forest of Hezange and the forest of Przemysl, we have assumed the offensive and driven the enemy across the frontier.

"Russian: On the river San and to the south of Przemysl the Russian offensive is becoming more accentuated."

Position of Austrians.

Berlin, Oct. 26, via Sayville, Oct. 27.—An official Austrian war bulletin given out in Berlin today, says that combined Austrian and German forces held strong positions in the long and almost continuous battle line from Strzy and Sambor in Galicia, thence to a point east of Przemysl and along the San river in a straight line to Plozk in Russian Poland.

The main Russian army is being engaged. The Austrian offensive has been successful in the lower San river to the southeast of Przemysl.

Battle at Ivangorod.

Vienna, via Rotterdam, London, Oct. 27.—An official communication given out here today says:

"In the fighting before Ivangorod we have, up to the present time, captured 1,000 Russians and nineteen machine guns.

"Near Jaroslavl a Russian colonel and two hundred soldiers were forced to surrender.

"In Galatze and in the vicinity of Pasieczna the enemy has been driven back. The situation generally is unchanged. (Signed) Gen. Von Hofer."

German Report.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The German embassy today announced the receipt of an official wireless from Berlin saying:

"In the eastern theatre of war our offensive against Augustow is progressing well, and near Ivangorod the fighting is favorable, but with no final decision yet."

In regard to the situation around the Yser canal, the report is the same as last night's official statement from Berlin.

Tells of Conditions.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Reprints received here from Rotterdam set forth that the British warship struck by German artillery fire broke into flames. This information was given out in Berlin today.

According to reports received here from Antwerp, 50 firms of that city will present to the British government claims for compensation for the destruction of goods after the evacuation that city was determined upon. These claims amount to about $40,000,000 and will be presented through Brand Whitlock, the American minister to Belgium.

The foregoing information was made public in Berlin today through official channels.

MINERS IMPRISONED IN BURNING TUNNEL

EXPLOSION AT MITCHELL MINE, NEAR ROYALTON, ILLINOIS COSTS MANY LIVES

Rush Rescue Work to Save Lives of Hundred Men Caught in Lower Level of Mine—Believe all Dead.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Royalton, Ill., Oct. 27.—At least forty miners lost their lives when 300 men were caught in the Mitchell mine near here by gas explosion, soon after the day shift entered the workings today. One hundred men escaped, thirty or forty bodies had been found by rescuers at 11 o'clock, and 100 were known to be imprisoned in a lower level which was burning.

The mine is a mile from this town. The explosion was distinctly heard here. Everyone in town except the telephone operators, hurried to the mines and aid was summoned from Du Quoin and Murphysboro. A rescue car also was sent from Benton.

The work of rescue began immediately and within two hours several bodies had been taken from the workings.

No hope is held out for the hundred men known to have been working on the lower level. The flames make it impossible for rescuers to reach them, and it is believed here that all are dead.

Royalton is a mining village 50 miles southeast of St. Louis, on the St. Louis Iron Mountain & Southern Railroad.

Rescue Many.

Murphysboro, Ill., Oct. 26.—One hundred and fifty persons have been taken alive from the Royalton mines at noon. Eighty-five of these had been over come by the flames. Two of these died at the top of the mine.

FRENCH ALPINE TROOPS ARE SKILLED FIGHTERS.

(Correspondence of The A. P.)

Basel, Switzerland, Oct. 27.—The mountain war going on in the Vosges has brought into action one of the most interesting bodies of French troops, the Alpine Chasseurs. They are finely built, powerful men, specially equipped for the mountains. They are almost invisible in the dark pine forests.

Favorite strategem in their fighting is to occupy arranged that even a wounded or a dead man does not fail. Another device of the French Alpine troops is for a part of them, secreted in the bushes, to hold their rifle fire until German troops have passed well into a wood, and then to fire upon them from all sides. The light artillery is carried upon mules.

"Buck the Line Hard"

This old time appeal of a famous American is good advice to business men in these times. Business is no game for weaklings.

This is the time to go after business and go after it hard.

This is the time to produce, to sell—TO ADVERTISE.

Across the line is a goal—the goal of good times, of prosperity, of the best business America has known in a generation.

Let us paraphrase that quotation and make it real.

Go after business, don't falter, advertise—don't be a mollycode.

EXCESS SUM PAID ON GERMAN WAR LOAN

Kate Hume Said to Have Originated Story About Sister—Report German Submarine Sunk.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, wireless, Oct. 27.—Information given out in official quarters in Berlin today is as follows:

The total of $300,000,000 has been paid in on the German war loan although the loan itself was for only $650,000,000.

"The latest returns of the Imperial Bank show specie to the amount of $4,000,000, an increase of more than $6,750,000."

An English governess named Kate Hume made the allegation that German officers had attacked and mutilated her sister Grace, and produced the signature of two Belgian clerics to support her claim. According to the London Times an English court declared that Kate Hume, moved by hysterical hate of the Germans, had forged those signatures and invented the entire story.

The court sentenced her to three months for forgery.

Reports reaching here from Constantinople declare there has been sanguinary encounters between the English garrison and Indian troops at Alexandria, Egypt. Thirty men were reported killed by a court martial held in Alexandria.

The Havas news agency of Paris reports officially from London that the English torpedo boat, destroyer, Edder, rammed and sank a German submarine off the coast of Holland. German official reports of this same incident are to the effect that while the ramming is a fact, the German torpedo boat was not harmed and without the loss of her crew.

"The military correspondent of the London Times declares that heavy German artillery has destroyed all the German lines to which the English and French commanders."

NORWEGIAN COMPANIES FORCED TO STOP WORK BECAUSE OF CONFLICT.

(Correspondence of The A. P.)

Christians, Oct. 27.—Some of the great companies in Norway have had to stop work as payments from England have been cut off. Several of these companies have been harvesting Norwegian water falls for electric power. The Norwegian Products and Carbide Company Limited, for instance, has been erecting machinery to develop 100,000 horse power but after having spent a few million crowns it has entirely ceased operations, throwing about a thousand men out of work. Mining companies, exporting ore to England, Belgium and France, have also stopped work. Their market at present is closed. About 3000 hands in this industry are idle. The great industrial factories are kept going as before the war, and there is a greater demand for workmen than there are men to fill the places. On the Government Railway, under construction, where wages are as high as five dollars a day, they cannot get hands enough.

There is also plenty of employment for sailors in the merchant marine, and wages are raised considerably because of the danger of floating mines. Two Norwegian steamers have thus far been blown up by these machines. The fishing fleet has kept at work in the North Sea and had very good catches.

EMPEROR EUGENIE TAKES INTEREST IN WAR EVEN THOUGH 89 YEARS OLD.

(Correspondence of The A. P.)

London, Oct. 27.—Although the Empress Eugenie is almost 89 years old, she is taking the greatest interest in the war and has set aside an entire wing of her house at Farnborough Hill for the use of wounded officers.

Several injured officers are now recuperating there and their aged hostess personally supervises their care. Her estate is near the great camp at Aldershot which King George and Queen Mary visit frequently. Practically all of Empress Eugenie's men servants have joined the army in France. Nevertheless she entertains many of the distinguished military men who visit Aldershot, availing for her plain fare and explaining that her cooks have more important work now than preparing food for an aged empress and her guests.

WATER OF YSER RED WITH GERMAN BLOOD

HAND TO HAND ENCOUNTERS FOLLOWED CROSSING OF KAISER'S FORCES SUN-DAY NIGHT.

BODIES BLOCK CANAL

Hundreds Are Drowned in Awful Carnage Which Followed Desperate German Attack—Calls It "Night of Hell."

London, Oct. 27.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in northern France telegraphed under date of Sunday night regarding fighting on the river Yser, says:

"There were 2,500 German bodies in the Yser canal this morning after the fighting in the night. Many were drowned in the crossing of the water, while Dismude streets were strewn thick with the dead."

"These ghastly facts alone give some idea of the savagery of the fighting, the desperation of the German attacks, and the stubbornness of the allies' resistance."

A Night of Hell.

"The night was hell from dark to dawn. At almost every point on the line men were opposed by men. Sometimes at a few hundred yards distance, but more often in close grips. Face to face men were wrestled and died by drowning in the crossing of the water. The Germans had had orders to get through that night, cost what it might. An officer of theirs who was captured said that the delay for more than a week in crossing the water was because the automatic military mind in Germany. It must be crossed tonight if it costs thousands of men."

"That in effect was the order given and the German soldiers did their best."

"Probably five or six thousand of them gave their lives that night. They could not give more, yet they failed, not because the Germans did not literally obey their orders. They crossed the river all right as they were bid, but once through they could not make good. They were mowed down with rifle shots, torn into fragments by shells and bayoneted back yard by yard over their own dead, into the waters of the canal."

Story of Eye Witness.

The official press bureau makes public today the story of an eye witness supplementing a narrative of Oct. 24 and bringing the general course of operations in France up to Oct. 26. The arrival of reinforcements, it says, enabled the British troops to assist in the crossing of the river Yser, where the enemy advanced from the northeast and east, holding a front extending from Mont Deschas, about ten miles south of that point and then turning to the east, to the west of Lille on the river Lys.

The statement continues:

"Germans Fail Back.

"South of the Lys the line extended to the north, east of Bethune and Vermelles. The allies encountered resistance all along the line on the 12th and 13th, when the enemy's right fell back hastily. Bailleul, seventeen miles northwest of east of Lille, which had been occupied by the enemy for eight days, was abandoned without a shot being fired."

"On the 14th our left wing advanced driving the enemy back, and on the night of the 15th we were in possession of all the country on the left bank of the Lys to a point five miles below Armentieres. The enemy retired from that town on the 16th, and the 17th, when the start distance of Frelinghen fell into our hands."

"The state of the crossings over the Lys indicated that no organized scheme of defense had been executed, some of the bridges being in a state of repair, others merely barricaded, while one was not even defended or broken."

A Determined Resistance.

"The resistance offered to our advance on the 15th was of a most determined character. The fighting consisted of fiercely contested encounters, infantry attacks on the villages being repulsed, the enemy's machine guns reduced the houses to ruins. Other villages were taken and retaken three times before they were finally secured."

"The French cavalry here gave well, some of the men were wounded, but the 16th the resistance was overcome, the enemy retiring five miles to the eastward."

Describing an incident of the fighting on the night of the 16th, the correspondent says that the important crossing of the Lys at Warneton was strongly held by the Germans with a barbed wire loopole at the bottom to enable the men to fire while lying down.

Blow Up Barricade.

"Our cavalry with the artillery blew the barricade to pieces and scattered the defenders," the narrative continues. "Advancing three quarters of a mile our troops reached the square when one of the buildings appeared to leap skywards. A sheet of flame and a shower of star shells at the same time made the place as light as day, and enabled the enemy to escape in surrounding houses for a devastating fire from rifles and machine guns. Our cavalry extricated themselves with the loss of one officer wounded and nine men killed and wounded, but a party of volunteers went back and carried off their wounded comrades from the inferno."

Unsuccessful Attack.

"During the 17th, 18th and 19th of October our right encountered strong opposition from the enemy about La Bassée, where they have established themselves behind embankments. On the center and left we made better progress, although the Germans were everywhere entrenched, and in spite of the bombardment held some villages on the Lys. At the close of each day several night counter strokes were delivered against one or another part of our line, but were all repulsed."

"Tuesday, Oct. 20, a determined but unsuccessful attack was made by virtually the whole of our line. At one point where one of our batteries made a counter attack, 1,100 German dead were found in a trench, and forty prisoners were taken."

"Armored motor cars equipped with machine guns are now playing a part in the war and have been most successful in dealing with all parties of mounted troops."

"Although the struggle in the northern area attracts more attention than the one in the Alsace, the fighting in this region still continues, although there has been alterations in the general situation. The enemy has made certain changes in the positions of their heavy artillery with the result that one or two places which formerly were safe are now subject to bombardment, while others which were approachable only by night or by crawling on hands and knees, now serve as recreation ground."

"DOPE" ON FOOTBALL IS BADLY MUDDLED

Princeton is Darkhorse in East. Harvard Should Defeat Michigan With Veterans Playing.

The muddled football question is proving a severe one to solve and there is conflicting "dope" regarding the outcome of the two big struggles scheduled for the coming Saturday. The poor showing of the Harvard team has been a sad blow to the Crimson followers while Michigan's defeat by the overwhelming score by Syracuse shows that Yost's team is not equal to the eastern calibre of football. The defeat was so big that there could be no alibi of a fluke while the Harvard showing against Pennsylvania state might be classed as over confidence as their first string men were sent out on scouting expeditions.

Michigan was conceded a golden chance to beat Harvard next Saturday with Brickley in the hospital but Yost's men will not fail. The team from Pennsylvania state for Mahan, Hardwick and Logan will be in the game and Haughton will probably open up. Yale meets Colgate, which should prove an easy prey. Princeton will be the darkhorse in the east as the Tigers have won three straight games including the strong Dartmouth eleven.

The western conference is sifted down between Chicago, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Illinois claims an edge on the big nine title so far but the Maroons are plugging away keeping the title in sight. On Saturday when the Wisconsin eleven team meets Stagg's team, one of the teams will be eliminated. Both teams appear evenly matched but past performances favor the Chicago eleven. Too much can not be placed on the drastic form shown by Wisconsin against Ohio or the score made by Chicago over the crippled Purdue team. Injured players on the Badger team should be in fighting form by Saturday and the winner of this game and Illinois will have the dispute to settle. Minnesota played her first conference game Saturday and by beating Iowa showed that William's men will be in at the finish.

In the state R. P. on by defeating the weak Marquette eleven is on par with Lawrence, Carroll and Beloit. The Appleton college team appears to have an edge on the state title with Beloit second. The defeat of Lake Forest by Marquette has muddled the "little five" conference. For Lake Forest was expected to win this game easily.

'CHERRY' WOODWORTH A SUCCESSFUL COACH

Janesville Product, a Student at Marquette, Is Making a Championship Team Out of Academy Youth.

Leigh "Cherry" Woodworth, better known as "Moose" at Marquette University, Milwaukee, where he is completing a course in dentistry, is making himself valuable as a football coach this season. Woodworth had no intentions to do any athletic work when he left for Milwaukee. This fall to assume senior work in the study of dentistry. Upon reaching Milwaukee he found a job open for him, that of coaching the Marquette Academy football eleven. He took hold of the squad, and in the past month has developed one of the fastest prep elevens in the middle west. His team journeyed to Chicago two weeks ago and held the last Loyola team to a scoreless tie. Last Saturday his warriors triumphed over Marquette University freshmen team 10 to 0. Woodworth asked Coach Curtis of the local high for a game sometime in November, but was refused. He says he has some valuable material and hopes to be able to claim the title in this section of the country when the season closes. The Janesville high school football eleven regret that "Cherry" did not stay in the city and aid in coaching the line, as the forward on the local team is the weakest spot.

BLUE ELEVEN MEET STOUGHTON FRIDAY

Hopes for the local high school winning a game or two on the gridiron this season, brightened yesterday afternoon, when it was announced that Harley Badger, star guard and tackle on the 1913 eleven would play the remainder of the season. He reported at practice in a suit and gaudied the faces of Captain Stewart and the other players on the evening. Perhaps it wasn't Badger alone for in the thick of all the wearers of the blue jerseys, was "Phil" Taylor, a tackle, who has been out of the game for the past two weeks. But on top of all this encouraging news, there is a serious problem facing the squad that is mighty disagreeable. It will take much pondering.

THE RETIRED BANKER HAS SOME FUN AT THE GOOD JUDGE'S DISCOMFORT.

THIS is how news of the Real Tobacco Chew spreads! A man tucks the little chew of "Right-Cut" away—gets the rich tobacco taste and the comfort of it and feels so good about it that he just can't help talking about it to his friends.

Mellow, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It's a ready chew, cut fine and short so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of every rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut".

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

The rapidly with which the stadia or stadiums among the larger colleges and universities are being erected throughout this country, brings about a new light in athletics, proving that intentions held by critics and faculties of having athletics a permanent feature in school life, are being carried out.

Today there are six beautiful stadiums gracing the campus grounds of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Syracuse, College of the City of New York, and Tacoma, Washington. Michigan have commenced the erection of a bowl similar to that of Yale, only it will be built as a semi-circle for the present time. When completed, if there is any cause to warrant its completion, it will seat 35,000 people.

There is an endless number of purposes to which these stadiums may be used during the course of a school year. Besides athletic games, track work will be a spring sport, in which the new stands will be a welcomed feature. In a more satisfactory manner, Commencement exercises will gradually be taken up inside the circle, and, it is believed, besides now and then a Greek play, or a modern drama presented.

It is interesting to note how some of these structures are being erected. The Yale bowl, for instance, a class of '79 donated the sum of $100,000, while the other sixty thousand was obtained by a guaranty loan, in which the athletic association at Harvard, will in time pay this sum back, through annual gate receipts. The proposition is a purely business one, in which the university is benefited.

Princeton was forced for years to replace new bleachers and rebuild weak spots in the grandstand on the old structure, at an annual waste expenditure of about ten thousand dollars. This waste will now be saved, as a part of the educational fund. A costly sum will now be realized each year for the benefit of the work of the university, in building this structure.

At Princeton, the athletic association are held liable for its total cost. Annually, the university will pay to the "Princeton" university's maintenance of the handsome stadium. The stadium is called the Palmer Memorial stadium, by virtue of an endowment of three hundred thousand dollars to the institution, for the erection of an athletic field. When the athletic association has fully covered its heavy debt, then the endowment will be solely for the university.

The stadium is called the Palmer Memorial stadium, by virtue of an endowment of three hundred thousand dollars to the institution, for the erection of an athletic field. When the athletic association has fully covered its heavy debt, then the endowment will be solely for the university.

Princeton was forced for years to replace new bleachers and rebuild weak spots in the grandstand on the old structure, at an annual waste expenditure of about ten thousand dollars. This waste will now be saved, as a part of the educational fund. A costly sum will now be realized each year for the benefit of the work of the university, in building this structure.

The rapidly with which the stadia or stadiums among the larger colleges and universities are being erected throughout this country, brings about a new light in athletics, proving that intentions held by critics and faculties of having athletics a permanent feature in school life, are being carried out.

Today there are six beautiful stadiums gracing the campus grounds of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Syracuse, College of the City of New York, and Tacoma, Washington. Michigan have commenced the erection of a bowl similar to that of Yale, only it will be built as a semi-circle for the present time. When completed, if there is any cause to warrant its completion, it will seat 35,000 people.

There is an endless number of purposes to which these stadiums may be used during the course of a school year. Besides athletic games, track work will be a spring sport, in which the new stands will be a welcomed feature. In a more satisfactory manner, Commencement exercises will gradually be taken up inside the circle, and, it is believed, besides now and then a Greek play, or a modern drama presented.

It is interesting to note how some of these structures are being erected. The Yale bowl, for instance, a class of '79 donated the sum of $100,000, while the other sixty thousand was obtained by a guaranty loan, in which the athletic association at Harvard, will in time pay this sum back, through annual gate receipts. The proposition is a purely business one, in which the university is benefited.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE.

THE GREEK motto "Know Thyself" which I so often quote, refers to physical as well as to mental and spiritual self-knowledge.

And yet it is possible to know and think too much about one's physical self. There has never been a time when the popular interest in medical science was so great as it is today. Medical books are no longer relegated to the shelves of libraries, but appear in our most popular magazines. As you can remember, in last month's issue of a magazine which is making a record for popular circulation, the leading article was medical. Furthermore, practically everyone to whom I spoke on the subject, had read that article and that the popular mind is turned towards the subject of disease, and many people acquire a strange smattering of medical knowledge.

In so far as they use this knowledge to keep well with, nothing could be better. But they do not always use it so wisely. Let me illustrate.

A friend of mine who has a deep interest in things medical reads and talks a great deal about disease. The result is that she is always watching herself and others, and fancying that she detects the beginnings of some disease.

For instance, "I've got such a terrible pain behind my eyes. I do hope it isn't conjunctivitis. My eye itched this morning and I was foolish enough to rub it. That's the way conjunctivitis starts. Getting a germ in. The doctor said that was what started Mary's attack. You know what a terrible time she had staying in that dark room for weeks. Wouldn't it be dreadful if something like that happened to me just as we are planning to go away?"

Again, "I'm so worried. Ruth has a sore throat and a fever, and I know that just the way scarlet fever starts. I don't know what I should do with that. I'd have to take the other children out of school and none of them have had it."

Needless to say the pain behind the eyes turned out to be an indigestion headache, and little Ruth's trouble proved to be an ordinary sore throat.

If my friend had had a little less medical knowledge she would have had a great deal less worry.

Perhaps I am wrong in thinking that this type is common, but as I have several in my own acquaintance I assumed that it might be.

There is such a thing as thinking too little about one's health—not knowing or needing the common signs. And there is such a thing as thinking too much about diseases, being too ready to expect them, too eagerly fearful to detect them. Don't think too much about disease. It isn't a pleasant subject. Leave that to the doctors. Have a good trustworthy family doctor and go straight to him when things get out of order in spite of you. It's cheaper in the end. But for your part think about health. Study preventive medicine all you want. Study how to make your body strong and able to throw off disease. That's the best way to "know thyself."

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am seven years old and have been keeping company with a girl named Mary for two years. He has asked me to marry him in two years. He is a very nice young man and I love him very much. Although I have given him my heart, I have never given him my body. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not.

He says in two years he will be able to keep my body. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not.

He says in two years he will be able to keep my body. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not. I am not sure if I should or not.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES.

Noisebleed—Although an ordinary nosebleed often alarms, there is no cause for fear, for it does away with several ways of treating a nosebleed in order to give immediate relief.

(1) Roll a piece of brown paper, wet it and press between upper lip and gum. Hold head back. (2) Sit on chair with head back. Press tongue against base of mouth. (3) Sniffle peroxide or salt water. Often merely sniffing cold water will stop a nosebleed. (4) Chew paper or cotton. If these simple remedies fail, consult a doctor should be consulted.

ENAMEL YOUR BED AT HOME. First rub the marred paint smooth with fine sandpaper. Do this gently, so as not to rub the paint right into the pores of the skin. If you can get it all off it will be better, for then you will have a uniform surface.

This done, go all over the bedstead with white enamel paint, which is sold in paint shops and by some druggists. Use a broad brush and sweep it smoothly and evenly over the iron until all is covered.

Let the first coat dry perfectly dry before applying the second.

Three coats may be necessary to make the whole of the dark iron white.

The advantage of a white enamel apart from the pleasing effect is that it may be renewed when it becomes defaced and that it will be the better for each renewal.

THE TABLE. Bean Chowder—Pick over and wash about two cups of brown beans; soak over night and cook in the same water until thoroughly done, adding more water as necessary. Keep plenty of water in. Add a few slices of salt pork or bacon, one large onion, two potatoes, one pint tomatoes, handful of macaroni, and simmer an hour or more. This is a delicious dish for winter or cold days.

Good Breakfast Dish From Left-Over Mashed Potatoes—Beat together one cup milk, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt, and left-over mashed potatoes. Then add one teaspoon baking powder and enough flour to make a good biscuit dough. Roll out one-fourth inch thick, cut into squares, fry in a hot lard, serve with syrup or butter.

Easy Omelette—One slice bread soaked in one cup milk, yolks of five eggs, butter size of walnut, salt and pepper. Mix all together, fold into a bag, and cook in a hot pan. Pour in hot iron spider and bake on top of stove until set, then put in oven and brown.

English Walnut Cake—One cup chopped walnuts, one cup granulated sugar, one-half cup cracker dust, four eggs beaten separately, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon almond extract. Bake in moderate oven forty minutes.

New Lemon Pie—First part: One tablespoon flour (heaping), one cup sugar, rind and juice of one lemon, butter size of large hickorynut. Second part: Two eggs (beaten), one cup milk. Third part: Whites of the two eggs (beaten stiff). Stir second part into first part, then fold in third part carefully. This is new and delicious.

USE GOOD ENGLISH. Use Good English, No Matter How Great You May Be. (This is Lesson XIV in a series of short, simple lessons in English, by C. R. Rounds, Inspector of English, Wisconsin State Normal Schools.)

GOT. Most of these lessons have been intended to help teachers, workmen, stenographers, pattern-makers, salesmen, and others of us in various common walks of life; but this lesson is intended more particularly for our great cartoonists and authors. It is hoped that if you find a cartoon where the printed explanations are guilty of some of the errors here mentioned, you will mail a marked copy of this lesson to the offending artist. Our artists certainly ought not to mislead us.

Here is the particular error that inspired this lesson: You gotta hand it to so and so. Gotta is meant to represent the way we pronounce got to, of course. But got is the past tense or past participle of the verb get, and the expression that is actually used, or that was, I firmly believe, actually used, before authors and artists introduced the gotta, was You've got to do so and so. That, while it is not, perhaps, worst rate English, is defensible. It means You have got to; and while must, or have alone would better express the thought, yet have got is used by so many careful speakers that it is not worth while fighting it.

But we must fight the we gotta or you gotta. Let us make it uncomfortable for cartoonists or authors who misrepresent our common speech. Let us make them put in the you've at any rate.

And if any of you should be writing to them, or enclosing this as a clipping, just hint to them that they ought to put periods at the ends of sentences; and remind them that the apostrophe is used in contractions to show the omission of a letter, as in they're, you're, it's, don't, doesn't, etc. It won't hurt them a bit to be criticized.

Poor Lighting for City. It was in 1416 the people of London first started to hang out candles upon dark nights, and it was not enforced by parliament until 1661, the year after the great fire. Edward Heming, who invented the oil lamp, was engaged in 1664 to place a light before every tenth door on moonless nights.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The sun streamed into the warm, bright room and touched the leaves and blossoms of a thrifty rose bush that stood on the window sill.

When the meal was finished, the little girl wiped the dishes, while the grandfather brought up a basin of apples from the cellar. Tilted back in his chair against the wall he began shelling popcorn. The odor of fragrant corn filled the room.

When all were ready to bet down by the little square stand, on which was a glass lamp and a pile of newspapers and magazines.

The little girl brought out her blue cradle and doll and began putting it away on the shelf.

"There's a new independent, Florence. You can read 'Bits of Travel at Home,'" said the man.

"Oh, goodie!" cried the child tucking in her doll and seating herself by the stand on which the buttered popcorn and apples were temptingly placed.

While the reading was in progress the old man sat immersed in thought, a troubled look on his face.

"I've got your candle while I do up your bed pillows," finally instructed the busy old lady, laying down her work. She took a stick of wood from the oven, wrapped it in a flannel cloth, and laid it on the child's arm as she approached with the candle.

"Good night, grandma and grandpa," she said and closed the door behind her.

The old man rose and wound the clock, then sat down by his wife. "I shall have to pay the note I signed with Charles," he said quietly.

"The bankrupt has taken all the money we have except $300," she was silent a moment. Then said:

"We have the home, the cow, the pig, the chickens, the bees and the taxes. That's living right there. The interest on the $300 will pay the taxes. I can dress myself by helping the neighbors occasionally."

"I can't bear to think of that," said the old man.

"Don't you mind a bit, Pa. I'm plenty able and we shall get along. I'm willing to help you manage, so keep your spirits up."

The door opened and a stout, elderly man stamped the snow from his feet as he handed a pail of milk to his wife. He was followed by a little girl in a red hood and jacket. She hung these away and returned to the sitting room as her grandmother placed the hot biscuits.

If You're Entertaining On Hallowe'en You'll Appreciate These Suggestions

Hallowe'en offers one of the most enjoyable opportunities for informal entertaining and above all things the charm of a Hallowe'en party depends on the decorations. If possible, do away with gas light and depend entirely on candles for your illumination.

If expense is to be considered the woods and country furnish material galore for decorating. What could be more appropriate for such an occasion than branches of autumn leaves, berries, pumpkins for jack-o'-lanterns and fruits of various kinds?

It is quite appropriate to serve your spread on bare board tables or use the crepe paper tablecloths and napkins made for the purpose.

A roll of Hallowe'en crepe paper will furnish decorations for plates, wooden or white china, and tumblers in the shape of witches, black cats, etc., which may be cut out and applied with library paste.

An appropriate punch bowl for the center of the table may be made of a large pumpkin hollowed out and decorated around the top with bunches of grapes.

Inside the pumpkin arrange a pail of sweet cider and have within reach a long handled ladle.

If bare tables are used appropriate plate doilies may be easily made by pasting highly colored maple leaves around a paper doily.

Suitable candlesticks for Hallowe'en would be rosy apples hollowed out in the center to hold the candle.

To add to the merriment of the occasion, pass around a basket of old-fashioned molasses taffy cut in pieces and wrapped in wax paper.

Surround each one with a slip of paper on which you have written a fortune suitable for Hallowe'en, and do them up in fringed tissue paper, twisting the ends like old-fashioned kisses. Have one color for the women and another for the men.

The following menu is in keeping with the occasion:

Hallowe'en Salad—Break up into small pieces and boil in well salted water one and one-half cups of macaroni. A tablespoon of chicken gravy or bouillon cube added to the water improves the flavor, also a level tablespoonful of butter.

Cook until the macaroni is tender and the water has all cooked away; drain well and spread out on plates to cool. To two cups of the cooked macaroni cut in one-half inch lengths, add two cups of finely shredded cabbage and two sour apples cut in fine strips. Stir lightly together, add salt and pepper to taste, and mix with enough mayonnaise or boiled salad dressing to make it the right consistency.

Serve on a crisp inner leaf of lettuce.

If perfectly seasoned and mixed this is a delicious salad. Do not put the different ingredients together very long before the salad is to be served as the juice of the apple tends to thin it.

Cream Cheese and Lettuce Sandwiches—Slice white bread very thin. Butter smoothly and lightly. Spread one side with cream cheese mixed with enough cream to make it spread easily and lay on the other slice a leaf of crisp lettuce dipped in mayonnaise.

Put the slices together.

Large sandwiches cut into rounds of white bread and on the top round of each sandwich cut a grotesque face. On the lower part of the sandwich spread butter mixed with a little currant jelly, so that when the two round pieces are put together the face will be silhouetted.

Pumpkin Fanchonettes—Cream together two tablespoons of butter and two-thirds of a cup of sugar; add the yolks of two eggs well beaten; and two tablespoons of molasses; one-half a tablespoon of ginger, one teaspoon of cinnamon, a scant one-half teaspoon of salt, one and one-half cups of rather thick stewed or strained pumpkin and one cup of rich milk.

When the mixture is well mixed, spread in a moderate oven. Make a meringue for the tops of the whites of the eggs beaten stiff with two tablespoons of sugar. Spread a little over each fanchonette and return to the oven to color slightly.

Outline a face on the top of each with dried currants.

Nut Doughnuts—Beat three eggs till light without separating; add nine tablespoons of sugar, five tablespoons of milk, four tablespoons of melted butter, one-third of a teaspoon of nutmeg, two cups of flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder, a pinch of salt and one-half of a cup of finely chopped nuts. Roll, cut and fry in the usual way. This recipe makes about two dozen doughnuts, and they are fine.

As a finish to the meal the chafing dish may be brought to the table and used for roasting chestnuts. Use perfect nuts, cut a slit in each one and cover them in the pan till they are crisp.

Velvet Molasses Taffy—Mix together one cup of molasses, three cups of granulated sugar, one cup of boiling water, and three tablespoons of vinegar.

When it begins to boil add one-half teaspoonful of tartar. Stir during the last part of the cooking and add one teaspoon of butter and a pinch of soda.

When pulling add vanilla.

LITTLE DAUGHTER VERY DELICATE

MOTHER TELLS HOW VINOL MADE HER DELICATE CHILD ONE OF THE HEALTHIES.

Fayetteville, N. C.—"My little daughter was in delicate and very poor health and had so little strength it caused us a great deal of uneasiness. I noticed an advertisement of Vinol and decided to try it. The results were simply marvelous as her appetite improved at once, she gained so much in weight and looks that my friends all commented on the change. She is now one of the healthiest children in town and does not need medicine of any kind. All mothers who have delicate children should try Vinol."—Mrs. Gordon Jessup, Fayetteville, N. C.

Vinol is a wonderful appetizer and you can see delicate, ailing children improve day by day under its use. It is the tissue building and medicinal elements of cod's livers, added to the blood making, strength creating properties of tonic iron which makes Vinol so superior to other tonics in building up health and strength for delicate children, feeble old people and weak, run-down, nervous debilitated men and women.

We wish every mother who has a delicate child would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. Smith Drug Co., Janesville, Wis.

NOTE—You can get Vinol at the leading drug store in every town where this paper circulates.

LEAVES MAKE EXCELLENT FERTILIZER FOR GARDEN.

The disposal of the large number of leaves which have fallen from the trees is a source of worry to most property owners at this time. The recent rains have soaked the leaves to such an extent that it is almost impossible to burn them and few care to leave them lying on the lawns throughout the winter. The best plan, however, at all times after raking them into heaps, is to carry them to some obscure place on your lot and place them on a pile. A few boards placed on top will prevent the leaves from blowing about, and in the spring they will be well rotted and afford one of the best of fertilizers for the garden.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 13 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 13 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

The dignity of a staff council could not restrain Marta. Her emotion must have action. She sprang to his side and seized his hand, her exultation mixed with penitence over the way she had wronged him and Partow. Their self-contained purpose had been the same as hers and they had worked with a soldier's fortitude, while she had worked with whims and impulses. She bent over him with gratitude and praise and a plea for forgiveness in her eyes, submerging the thing which he sought in them. He flushed bravely in happy embarrassment, incapable of words for an instant; and silently the staff looked on.

"And I agree with Partow," Lanstron went on, "that we cannot take the range. The Grays still have numbers equal to ours. It is they, now, who will be singing 'God with us' with their backs against the wall. With Partow's goes my own appeal to the army and the nation; and I shall keep faith with Partow, with Miss Gailand, and with my own ideas, if the government orders the army to advance, by resigning as chief of staff—my work finished."

Westerling and his aide and valet, inquiring their way as strangers, found the new staff headquarters of the Grays established in an army building, where Bouchard had been assigned to trivial duties, back of the Gray range. As their former chief entered a room in the disorder of maps and packing-cases, the staff-officers rose from their work to stand at salute like stone images, in respect to a field-marshal's rank. There was no word of greeting but a telling silence before Turcas

"We've come for Westerling!" spoke. His voice had lost its former timidity and become natural. The two men on his bulging temples were a little more pronounced, his thin features a little more plucked, but otherwise he was unchanged and he seemed equal to another strain as heavy as the one he had undergone.

"We have a new government, a new premier," he said. "The old premier was killed by a shot from a crowd that he was addressing from the balcony of the palace. After this, the capital became a city. As we got in touch with the divisions, we had the army in better shape than we had before. It would be there as a reservoir of spirit."

"There is a public," he said. "The wife was lying down and crying in sleep."

Now Westerling grasped the fact that he was no longer chief of staff. He drew himself up in a desperate attempt at dignity; the staff saluted again, and, uncertainly, he followed the orderly, with the aide and valet still in loyal attendance.

Two figures were in the doorway: a heavy-set market woman with a fringe of down on her lip and a cadaverous, tidily dressed old man, who might have been a superannuated schoolmaster, with a bronze cross won in the war of forty years ago on his breast and his eyes burning with the youthful fire of Grandfather Frangin's.

"They got the premier in the capital. We've come for Westerling! We want to know what he did with our sons! We want to know why he was beaten!" cried the market woman.

"Yes," said the veteran. "We want him to explain his lies. Why did he keep the truth from us? We were ready to fight, but not to be treated like babies. This is the twentieth century!"

"We want Westerling! Tell Westerling to come out!" rose impatient shouts behind the two figures in the doorway.

"You are sure that he has one?" whispered Turcas to Westerling's aide. "Yes," was the choking answer. "Yes, it is better than that—with a glance toward the mob. 'I left my own on the table.'"

"We can't save him! We shall have to let them—"

Turcas's voice was drowned by a great roar of cries, with no word except "Westerling!" distinguishable that pierced every crack of the house. A wave of movement starting from the rear drove the veteran and the market woman and a dozen others through the doorway toward the stairs. Then the sound of a shot was heard overhead.

"The man you seek is dead!" said Turcas, stepping in front of the crowd, his features unrelenting in authority. "Now, go back to your work and leave us to ours."

"I understand, sir," said the veteran. "We're no argument with you."

"Yes," agreed the market woman. "But if you ever leave this range alive we shall have none. So, you stay!"

Looking at the bronze cross on the veteran's faded coat, the staff saluted; for the cross, though it were hung on rags, wherever it went was entitled by custom to the salute of officers and "present arms" by sentries.

After Lanstron's announcement to the Brown staff of his decision not to cross the frontier, there was a restless movement in the chairs around the table, and the grimaces on most of the faces were those with which a practical man regards a Utopian proposal. The vice-chief was drumming on the table edge and looking steadily at a point in front of his fingers. If Lanstron resigned he became chief.

"Partow might have this dream before he won, but would he now?" asked the vice-chief. "No. He would go on!"

"Yes," said another officer. "The world will ridicule the suggestion; our people will overwhelm us with their anger. The Grays will take it for a sign of weakness."

"Not if we put the situation rightly to them," answered Lanstron. "Not if we go to them as brave adversary to brave adversary, in a fair fight."

"We can—we shall take the range!" the vice-chief went on in a burst of right conviction when he saw that opinion was with him. "Nothing can stop this army now! He struck the table edge with his fist, his shoulders shivering.

"Please—please, don't!" implored Marta softly. "It sounds so like Westerling!"

The vice-chief started as if he had received a sharp pin-prick. His shoulders unconsciously relaxed. He began a brief study of a certain point on the table top. Lanstron, looking first at one and then at another, spoke again, his words as measured as they ever had been in military discussion and eloquence. He began outlining his own message which would go with Partow's to the premier, to the nation, to every regiment of the Brown, to the Grays, to the world. He set forth why the Browns, after tasting the courage of the Grays, should realize that they could not take their range. Partow had not taught him to put himself in other men's places in vain. The boy who had kept up his friendship with dying officers after he was an officer knew how to sink the plumes and lance and sword. He reminded the Brown soldiers that there had been a providential answer to the call of "God with us," he reminded the people of the Grays that would be lost to no end but to surrender; he begged the army and the people not to break faith with that principle of "Not for shame, but for ours," which had been their strength.

"I should like you all to sign it—to make it simply the old form of the staff has the honor to report," he said finally.

There was a hush as he finished—the hush of a deep impression when one man waits for another to speak. All were looking at him except the vice-chief, who was still staring at the table as if he had heard nothing. Yet every word was etched on his mind. The man whose name was the symbol of victory to the soldiers, who would be more than ever a hero as the news of his charge with the African Braves traveled along the lines, would go on record to his soldiers as saying that they could not take the Gray range. This was a handicap that the vice-chief did not care to accept; and he knew how to turn a phrase as well as to make a soldierly decision. He looked up smilingly to Marta.

"I have decided that I had rather not be a Westerling, Miss Gailand," he said. "We'll make it unanimous. And you," he burst out to Lanstron—"you legatee of old Partow; I've always said that he was the biggest man of our time. He has proved it by catching the spirit of our time and incarnating it."

Vaguely, in the whirl of her joy, Marta heard the chorus of assent as the officers sprang to their feet in the elation of being at one with their chief again. Lanstron caught her arm, fearing that she was going to fall, but a burning question rose in her mind to steady her.

"Then my shame—my sending men to slaughter—my sacrifice was not in vain!" she exclaimed.

The sea of people packed in the great square of the Brown capital made a roar like the thunder of waves against a breakwater at sight of a white spot on a background of gray stone, which was the head of an eminent statesman.

"It looks as if our government would last the week out," the premier chuckled as he turned to his colleagues at the cabinet table.

As yet only the brief bulletins whose publication in the newspapers had aroused the public to a frenzy had been received. The cabinet, as eager for details as the press, had remained up, awaiting a fuller official account.

"We have a long communication in preparation," the staff had telegraphed. "Meanwhile, the following is submitted."

"Good heavens! It's not from the army! It's from the grave!" exclaimed the premier as he read the first paragraphs of Partow's message. "Of all the concealed dynamite ever!" he gasped as he grasped the full meaning of the document, that piece of news, as staggering as the victory itself, that had lain in the staff vaults for years. "Well, we needn't give it out to the press; at least, not until after mature consideration," he declared when they had reached the end of Partow's appeal. "Now we'll hear what the staff has to say for itself after gratifying the wish of a dead man," he added as a messenger gave him another sheet.

"The staff, in loyalty to its dead leader who made victory possible, and in loyalty to the principles of defense for which the army fought, begs to say to the nation—"

It was four o'clock in the morning when this dispatch concluded with "We heartily agree with the foregoing," and the cabinet read the names of all the general staff and the corps and division commanders. Counting crowds in the streets were still shouting hoarsely and sometimes drunkenly: "On to the Gray capital! Nothing can stop us now!" The premier tried to imagine what a sea of faces in the great square would look like in a rage. He was between the people in a passion for retribution and a headless army that was supposed to charge across the frontier at dawn.

"The thing is sheer madness!" he cried. "His insubordination! I'll have it suppressed! The army must go on to gratify public demand. I'll show the staff that they are not in the saddle. They'll obey orders!"

He tried to get Lanstron on the long Grange.

"Sorry, but the chief has retired," answered the officer on duty sleepily. "In fact, all the rest of the staff have, with orders that they are not to be disturbed before ten."

"Tell them that the premier, the head of the government, their commander, is speaking!"

Had a Touch of Them.

Laddie was greatly impressed when the baby turned out to be a girl. Seeing his aunt coming, he rushed to the door and babbled with excitement: "O, auntie, come right in; we've got the prettiest bundle of life."

How Many Buckets of Coal Will You Burn This Season?

IT doesn't do any good to "kick" about the increasing cost of coal and other fuel. The only thing to do is to figure HOW TO BURN LESS.

The TIME to do that figuring is NOW, at the beginning of winter.

If you are using an old stove that has seen better days, the chances are you are wasting a good many buckets of coal each week—nearly enough in a month or so to pay for one of these new, up-to-date REGAL-GARLAND HEATERS.

NEW MEMBERS TAKEN INTO DRAMATIC CLUB

Various Committees Were Appointed by President Hoffmeister.—Program Was a Feature.

At the third meeting of the Dramatic Society, held last evening at the city hall, ten new members were elected into the club by a majority vote. Each name was voted upon separately. Following are the new members: Allen Dearborn, Claude Alkin, Oscar Hammarlund, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rutter, and the Misses Jessica George, Grace Slaker, Sarah MacLean, Sonia Bunnin and Julia Enright.

Martin Kennedy, elected secretary at the second session held last Monday evening, was forced to resign, owing to difficulties and was replaced by Miss Elsie Davis, who was appointed as the new secretary. Miss Hazel Willey, past secretary of the organization, summarized the work of the first year, the form of a report of the contents of which proved very interesting to the members. It was a short history of the club, and agreed that the first year of the club was a success.

A suggestion by the president that the meetings begin promptly at seven-thirty every Monday night, met with the approval of the club. A motion was passed to purchase, at a convenient and at modern prices, the volumes of the "Theatre" magazine, which has been in circulation for five or six years. These volumes contain practically every stage artist of repute, with pictures and valuable information concerning each person. The club would use the volumes as references and as guides in its good work. Miss Mabel Greenman was appointed by the club to investigate into this matter and report at the next meeting.

Believing that temporary committees could better serve the members of the club as a whole, president Hoffmeister appointed four such groups, to handle the various affairs that come up in the club. They are as follows:

Program committee—Miss Greenman, chairman; the Misses Buckmaster, Baker, and Homer, and Messrs. Streicher, Deane and Fraunfelder. The president and Mrs. Day will be members of all committees.

Executive committee—Messrs. Oestrich and Gibbons, and the Misses Racine, Kostwick and Rose Morrissey.

Social committee—Mrs. W. A. Munn, chairman; the Misses Merrill, Mount, Dudley, Welsh, Lyons, and Mesdames Doane, H. Holmer, Messrs. Poniok, Koyne, Carle and Holsapple.

Membership committee—Miss Lenora Casford, chairman; the Misses Willey and Mary Stevens, and Messrs. Brown and French.

Miss Racine Kostwick opened the program by reading a paper describing "Joseph and His Brethren" as she saw it depicted in Chicago. The scenes were vividly pictured, and a review of the acting read to be understood readily by the members. The second and last number was a paper on "The Land of the Midnight Sun" in Lima on the night of November 13. Come and hear him.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS SALVATION WORKERS

Emil Seidel, Candidate for U. S. Senator, Would Give Laboring Man His Just Share.

Emil Seidel, former mayor of Milwaukee and candidate for United States senator on the social democratic ticket, spoke last evening to a small but closely interested audience at the city hall. About one hundred and twenty-five were present to hear what the exponent of the social democratic party had to deliver to the workers of the cause in this section of Wisconsin.

The candidate's speech here last evening was along the same lines as has been given throughout the north and northeastern parts of the state. It was a most interesting and a scathing attack on the democratic and republican parties, according to Mr. Seidel compensation for rendered power of brain and brawn have not advanced along parallel lines with existence of the modern age.

Speaker illustrated with stories his strong points, and more than once received the hearty applause of the audience.

He attacked the Sherman anti-trust law because it threatened the right to organize, which law, he said, was an attempt to put on similar basis man and property. The right to boycott has been taken away from the laborer; his employer enjoys the use of the blacklist.

Seidel compared present conditions of the laboring man with those of feudal times. When this system was in vogue no man had to beg for a job, he was employed by his own boss, he was not free when they could not pick him up, their jobs and their conditions of work. Thirty years ago the Knights of Labor demanded that a day of rest for labor be given in other words, he was to have a day of rest.

He said if the boss got five days a week instead of six and the church one, therefore the laborer was entitled to at least one day for himself and family.

The right to employment is an inalienable right, declared Seidel, and to solve the situation of so many unemployed throughout the country the socialists suggest the cutting off of the day of labor. Eight hours work, eight hours rest, and eight hours pleasure and eight hours of rest. That is the way socialism looks the matter in the face.

Mr. Seidel discussed the ten constitutional amendments and reasoned why they should be adopted. Each separate act was taken in its turn and features advantageous to each explained.

HAIR COMING OUT? GOT DANDRUFF OR DOES SCALP ITCH?—25 CENT DANDERINE

SAVE YOUR HAIR! MAKE IT SOFT, FLUFFY, LUSTROUS AND BEAUTIFUL.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

BAGGAGE IS HELD AT CUSTOM HOUSE

Janesville Tourists Expect to Receive Shortly Luggage Left in Exodus from Europe.

American tourists in hurried and hasty flight from Europe at the outbreak of hostilities thought more of their lives than of their worldly possessions for the time being. With everything in turmoil and the various belligerent governments commandeering every type of vehicular conveyance, the movement of anything but a handbag was practically an impossibility.

At New York City custom wharves, the baggage of every description sent there by the governments of European countries. It is the "left behind" of panic-stricken Americans. Providing they can identify their particular trunk or sack, it will be forwarded to them.

In these same New York custom houses there is baggage, the property of Janesville residents. T. O. Howe's party was compelled to abandon their luggage at Paris. It is now being held in New York.

Mrs. D. W. Holmes had to leave her trunk at Paris. They too have been forwarded to New York City and are being held there.

W. S. Jeffries party had their baggage insured with the American Express company. They had practically no trouble in bringing it through.

The Wild and the Lovejoy parties were in Switzerland and consequently came through with their luggage with but slight difficulty. The Swiss government had taken all horses and automobiles for army use, but despite this the Janesville parties were able to bring their way stacks to the stations and arrive home with them safely.

POST OFFICE BUILDING HAS BEEN REDECORATED

Several improvements have been made in the Janesville federal building. The exterior of wood and iron work has been repainted, the masonry repaired and the planting of the shrubbery completed. The money order and postal savings departments have been redecorated and a new room partitioned for the superintendent of mails.

ENGINE LEAVES TRACK; CRASHES INTO BUILDING

Switch foreman William Taylor and the down town Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway crew had a hard time yesterday afternoon in replacing switch engine No. 1048 near the electric company. The locomotive jumped the rails and crashed into the corner of the old water wheel shed at corner of the Knott box factory. A small portion of the corner of the shed was torn away.

ORDER SAFETY DEVICES TO PROTECT OPERATIVES IN WISCONSIN LAUNDRIES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—Additional orders for the safety of operatives in laundries were adopted today by the Wisconsin industrial commission. The three orders adopted today all apply to points of danger which have proved exceedingly hazardous. Expert committees have been at work on the order for some time. The most important order adopted for laundries is one which requires safeguarding of extractors. These extractors revolve at terrific speed and rinse the clothes by centrifugal force. In the past, serious accidents have occurred when operatives attempted to handle clothes while the machine was revolving. In some instances the employee's arm has been torn from the shoulder. The new order requires the equipment of these extractors with a cover that cannot be removed while the machine is revolving. The cover also must be equipped in such a manner that the machine cannot be started until the cover is fixed. This order goes into effect July 15, 1915, giving laundry owners sufficient time to investigate and to provide themselves with suitable appliances. Another order requires guards for flat-work ironers, which order is to prevent accidents which occur when the hands of employees get caught between the hot rollers. Recently in an accident of this nature a woman operative had the flesh and muscle seared from her right forearm. The new orders were drafted by an auxiliary committee of which Stephen Gesell and Charles Durnin, proprietors of Milwaukee laundries and members of the Wisconsin Laundrymen's association, were members.

METHODIST PLAN TO RAISE FIVE MILLION

Washington, Oct. 27.—Many bishops and high officials of the Methodist Episcopal church met here today for a three days' conference to plan raising $5,000,000 from the eastern conference for the support of aged widows and children of deceased pastors. Addresses will be made by Speaker Clark and about fifteen bishops in behalf of the campaign. The stimulus will be similar to that from the Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Northern and Southern Baptist, and Congressional churches, and Methodist Episcopal Church South will do their part in the work which they take care of retired ministers.

ELIZABETH CELEBRATION IS NOW IN FULL SWING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Elizabeth, Oct. 27.—With a big parade containing many floats depicting incidents in the history of Elizabeth, this city today began in earnest the celebration of its 250th anniversary, although services in the churches last Sunday marked the opening of the ceremonies. Tonight there will be hand concerts in different sections of the city and a display of fireworks.

Tomorrow will witness a pageant in which 1,000 people will participate. The First Presbyterian Church is celebrating its 250th year of existence along with the city, with President H. H. H. of Princeton and Butler of Columbia as the chief speakers.

BIG GUNS A BURDEN IN FIELD CAMPAIGNS

English Military Experts Show Where German Heavy Guns Have Hindered Future Success.

(Correspondence of The A. P.)

London, October 16.—Although the big guns used by the Germans have been the surprise of the war and are accredited with having caused the fall of Liege, Namur and Antwerp, some military experts in England question the wisdom of carrying such weapons into the field, regarding them as a burden which an army cannot afford to transport.

Colonel F. M. Maude, discussing the heavy guns, says in The Standard: "It would be interesting to obtain the exact facts and calculate what the policy of taking the 42-centimeter and 28-centimeter howitzers into the field really cost the Germans in loss of transport power for the food of the troops. I am willing to grant that the 42-centimeter weapon was admirably adapted for its purpose of destroying steel and concrete targets presented by the forts of Liege and Namur. But seeing that the weight of one of the shells is nearly equal to the weight of a whole square meal for one of their battalions, would not the available horsepower, whether mechanical or actual, have been far better employed in hauling food for men to the front in the first instance?"

Military experts writing for the English press say that big guns are not really a novelty. The new feature is their general use in the recent campaigns. Heavy guns were tried in the Franco-Prussian war over much the same territory where recent fighting has taken place, but their movement was found too much of a burden.

England has constructed a more formidable weapon than the German howitzer. It is Mallet's mortar, which was built for use in the Crimean War but not completed in time to go into the siege. The mortar is now at Woolwich arsenal. It was built in sections, each consisting of a thirty-six inch bore and a bursting power charge of 850 pounds of gunpowder. It was tested at Plumstead marshes and a shell sent with a full powder charge penetrated 18 feet and blew out a crater sixty-feet in diameter.

POSITIVELY MASTERS CROUP. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick choking mucus, and clears the phlegm. Opens up the air passages and stops the hoarse cough. The gasping, straining fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Mass, Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for croup and it always acts quickly. No wonder a man in Texas walked 15 miles to the store to get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Every user is a friend."

HERO OF THE WAR

The most envied man in the famous German cavalry rps is this trooper of the Uhlands who boasts that he was the first German to penetrate into the heart of Ostend. This occurred about two weeks ago. He was rewarded with the Iron Cross.

Chamberlain Gave Eyeglass to Girl. An amusing story is being told of the late Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. While he was crossing Westminster palace yard one day some years ago, he was accosted by a girl from the States with the cool request: "Mr. Chamberlain, please do give me your eyeglass for my cabinet at home." It was at once handed to her, guard and all, so promptly that the curio hunter apparently felt some remorse, and stammered: "Most likely I'm inconveniencing you." "Not at all," replied Mr. Chamberlain, as he produced from his pocket a morocco case, and took from it a spare monocle, which he screwed in position, and then went on his way smiling. It is said that every prudent person who wears a monocle carries a reserve in his waistcoat pocket, in case he drops his in the soup!

RUIN FOLLOWS ARMY IN BATTLE MARCHES

Peasants Turn Out to Bury Dead—Show Seventy Thousand Soldiers Laid in Rough Trenches.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) Esternay, France, October 16.—Parties of German soldiers separated from the main bodies of troops during the German retreat from the Marne are still hiding in the woods in this vicinity. The French armies passed on and there are too few soldiers left in this part of France to hunt down the German stragglers. They live upon the country but otherwise commit no depredations. Along the whole countryside peasants who have returned point out burial places of those who fell in wild fighting in this neighborhood and for 60 miles to the East. The dead were buried by 500 Paris firemen, assisted by 600 civilian laborers. It is said that the tally kept by the firemen shows that 70,000 dead were buried, about 30,000 of them French. The greatest slaughter was in the marshes near Soissons. Fifteen thousand dead were buried in long trenches at the bottom of a wooded hill. French and Germans are buried separately. On the long mounds above the French trenches have been set up rude wooden crosses, a few wild flowers have been scattered on the mounds and sometimes large stones have been placed at either end. Caps of French soldiers, showing the name of the regiment, have been placed on the crosses in the stones. The trenches in which the Germans are buried are unmarked. The son of General von Nolcke is buried near Esternay. Champillon, about two miles southeast of Coulommiers, is the furthest place south reached by the Germans on their march for the investment of Paris. The villages did not have more than 25 houses. All were burned. Twelve inhabitants have returned and among other repairs have patched up the schoolhouse. Six children are being taught there. Strewed over the plain near Fere-Champenoise are small piles of empty shells, pieces of broken rifles, artillery carriages, fragments of armor and various other wreckage from the fighting. In an open space about two miles long by a mile wide were some thickets where the German quick-firers had been concealed. On the ridge behind were placed German long-range guns, which were doing great damage to the French. It was here that three regiments of Turks asked to be allowed to charge the height on which was the artillery. Nothing was known of the quick-firers in the bushes in the middle of the field. The three regiments started. When they were within easy range the German quick-firers opened upon them. Only about half a regiment succeeded in getting forward and taking the machine guns. Reserves were then brought up and another charge resulted in the capture of the German guns on the hills after tremendous hand-to-hand encounters.

A Secret-keeper. One of the finest secret-keepers on record was an Irishman, a prisoner of '98, who was captured with a comrade. He told the officer in command that he could make very important disclosures, but that he dared not do so as long as the other man lived, since his life would not be worth a day's purchase if that other managed to escape. The officer presently cleared that difficulty out of the way; whereupon the prisoner said: "Now shoot me as soon as you please; I know he'd peech."

Historic Russian Town. Koshroma, where the first czar of Russia was crowned, is a pretty town of 45,000 inhabitants. It is also known for its beautiful monastery of Ipatiev, founded in 1320, but the town itself is much older. It was in this old monastery that Mikhail Fedorovich Romanov, who later became czar, was hidden when pursued by the Poles. He was founder of the dynasty of the Romanovs and the ancestor of the present czar. Before him the house of Rurik had ruled over Russia for seven centuries.

English Soap Clubs. "Soap clubs held here," is the notice in a shop window in Soho, London. On inquiry it was found that the clubs were similar to the hat and feather clubs which abound in Whitechapel and Bethnal Green. The money is pooled together every week for soap, and there is a draw who shall have it first. You may be lucky and get your soap the first week you join the club, or you may have to wait three months. But a glance at Soho waiting for soap suggests that it is not such a terrible hardship as it appears at first sight.
